

HUDDLESTON, C. West

C. West Huddleston, III, is the Chief Executive Officer of the National Association of Drug Court Professionals (NADCP) and the Executive Director of the National Drug Court Institute (NDCI). Prior to being appointed CEO, Mr. Huddleston served as the Deputy Director and then Director of NDCI for nine years. He is a board-licensed substance abuse counselor with 13 years of clinical experience working with misdemeanor and felony offenders at the county, state and federal levels. Mr. Huddleston worked throughout the Tennessee and Oklahoma justice systems. During this period, he teamed with both states' respective departments of corrections to develop, implement and operate numerous offender-specific, in-custody mental health and substance abuse treatment programs. Of particular pride to Mr. Huddleston is the Governor's Team Excellence award, given to his team for the design and implementation of the first prison therapeutic community and work camp within the Oklahoma Department of Corrections (The Bill Johnson Correctional Center). Mr. Huddleston has also served as the Director of two community corrections programs and as the interim Director of a 125-bed pre-release correctional center. In addition, he co-designed and implemented the first two drug courts in the State of Oklahoma, one of which served as an early mentor court for the U.S. Department of Justice.

He has been published extensively on drug courts, problem-solving courts and in-custody substance abuse treatment. Mr. Huddleston has served as a special consultant to the U.S. Department of Justice, U.S. Department of Transportation, U.S. Department of Health and Human Services, Drug Enforcement Administration (DEA), as well as with the Tennessee and Oklahoma Departments of Corrections. He currently is a past member of the Substance Abuse Committee of the American Correctional Association and a distinguished faculty member of the National Judicial College.
